

The U.S. Army Women's Museum at Fort Lee, VA will host its 6th Annual Flames of War Day on January 15, 2011 from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The public is invited to watch this exciting tournament of miniature war-games. There is no admission fee.

The tournament theme is "End of a Siege: Leningrad, Nov. 1943 to Feb. 1944," and features 24 war-gamers commanding miniature armies. Military war-gaming enthusiasts and World War II history buffs will enjoy observing the games taking place on 12 detailed terrain boards which recreate the war on the Russian Front. Visitors will see beautifully painted, historically accurate military miniature armies, watch infantry and tank battles, and learn about military history and battle tactics. Museum visitors are also invited to vote for the "Best Painted Army."

The U.S. Army Women's Museum will also have living historians depicting Soldiers on the Eastern Front with period uniforms and equipment. Historians will also host a one-hour lecture and discussion of the war on the Eastern Front in the afternoon.

The Museum will be open for regular tours and visits during the event. To find out more about the 6th Annual Flames of War event, call (804) 734-4327/4411.